Enjoying autumn in Yokohama

Fumiko Hayashi
Mayor of Yokohama

Temperatures are cooler in mornings and evenings, and we can sense the arrival of autumn outside by the way the leaves on trees are gradually beginning to turn and the cosmos flowers are coming into bloom. Many people undoubtedly like taking walks to find such signs of autumn.

Located next to Yokohama Zoological Gardens “Zoorasia,” Satoyama Garden has created a huge flower bed measuring 1 hectare for autumn, as it did for spring. The theme for this autumn is “Hills with Autumnal Brocade.” The garden is covered with plants and flowers displaying vivid hues of yellow, orange, and vermilion. I urge you to experience the autumnal scenery in this natural tract that touches the heart in a special way.

Farms in the city are starting to harvest sweet potatoes, persimmons, and other crops. We have entered the time of year for savoring autumn vegetables and newly harvested rice. Dining on foods that are right in season is one of the pleasures of a bountiful autumn.

Yokohama Marathon 2018 is going to be held toward the end of October. This event attracts some 28,000 entrants from inside and outside the city, and the sight of them all running through the streets of Yokohama is really spectacular. Besides performances by supporters at water supply points and types of hospitality unique to Yokohama such as “lucky meals” featuring famous local confections, the smiles runners flash to those cheering them on from the curb and other friendly interaction are not to be missed.

In Japan, autumn is the season for enjoying sports, the arts, and food. In Yokohama, it brings highly cosmopolitan festivals and plenty of events for appreciation of culture and the arts. We hope you take full advantage of it!

Outline of the General Account Statement for FY2017
